Lecture to acquaint students with the development of church offices and structures in early Christianity and, in particular, with the diversity of offices in early Christianity, the development and establishment of the office of bishop, the supraregional organisation of church structures, the development of patriarchates and the historical development of the claim of supremacy of the Bishop of Rome.
Intended learning outcomes
At the end of the course, students will have become familiar with the development of church offices and structures in the historical context of early Christianity and will be able to communicate information on the topic to others in an appropriate manner. They will understand historicity as a characteristic of the constitution of the Church. Students will have developed an awareness of how the key decisions in this area that set the course for the early Church are conditioned by their historical contexts and will be able to distinguish between this and its claim to transtemporal validity.
