Contents
Basic microbiological experiments are carried out. The internship includes methods of disinfection and sterilization, diagnostic determination of pathogens, staining and microscopy of grampositive and gramnegative pathogens, analysis of growth curves, determination of the cell count of bacteria, metabolic reactions in bacteria, determination of antibiotic resistance, familiarization with processes of horizontal gene transfer, generation of genetic mutations and their detection, analysis of gene regulation.
Intended learning outcomes
The students acquire the ability to apply microbiological and molecular methods with pathogenic bacteria. They are able to design, carry out and analyse scientific experiments. They are able to assess experimental and methodological errors. The students are able to develop strategies to solve problems. They can analyse and present own experimental data.
