Contents
This module includes two parts: The first part offers a general, practically oriented introduction to solving the typical problems encountered in research on historical, premodern topics, such as identifying dates, places, persons, titles, institutions, quotations, sources and books, as well as searching, obtaining and evaluating research materials. The appropriate use of digital online resources (databases, e-texts) is given particular attention. The second part focuses on the issues, sources and methods of cultural-historical research on late imperial China, introducing a range of subfields as represented by leading scholars and important publications. A critical approach to published research is encouraged based on controversial reviews.

Intended learning outcomes
In the first part, students are familiarized with the handling of a core set of reference book tools and the quickly growing range of digital online resources. Through practical exercises they develop their problem-solving skills. In the second part, they explore a range of subfields of cultural-historical research and get to know the various methodical approaches applied to them. Their critical attitude to published research is strengthened.
