Contents
One of the following sub-modules must be chosen. The sub-module EDP-Philology gives an overview of the discipline of digital humanities, the imparting of fundamental methods of digital humanities - abstraction, formalisation - and their use in the data modelling. Additionally, the module gives an overview of principles of the text encoding and relevant encoding systems (e.g. TEI) and design of digital editions, corpora and information systems as well as an overview of typical application methods of digital humanities in the humanities. The sub-module media gives an overview of the mediality of language and literature in a synchronic and diachronic view, particularly of the competition of different media (orality/textuality), the media change (e.g. handwriting/printing) and the consequences of mediality on the methods of literary production and reception.
Intended learning outcomes
Concerning the sub-module EDP philology: Students are able to use chosen methods of digital humanities in the humanities. Concerning the sub-module media: Students know how to deal with different media. They are able to describe and explain the media change and to analyse media appropriately.
