Contents
In the module will be read and critically discussed the most important key works and concepts from individual epochs of the anglophone literature of Great Britain and its former colonies (e.g. Renaissance, English Romanticism, literature of the 19th century, modern era and post-modern era). Thus, the module focuses particularly on specific aesthetic and literary trends as well as on historical and cultural features of different literary epochs.
Intended learning outcomes
After successful completion of the module, students will be able to classify key works of North American literature in their literature and historico-cultural correlation, to critically study these works, taking into account the latest and/or traditional research tendencies and methods, to validate and differentiate the results of the studies.
