Contents
The module gives an overview of basic knowledge concerning Europe's history and particularly concerning Germany's history, illustrated by specific examples. In the related courses, important issues of German and European history as well as their most important sources will be covered.
Intended learning outcomes
Students get an overview of central developments of the European and German history and thus, consolidate their basic knowledge of one or more temporal or thematic areas against the background of different aspects like politics, economy, culture, ideas and mentalities. They are able to classify this/these area/areas in a general historical context and to show interdependencies. They also expand their reference frame to non-European aspects. Moreover, they are able to choose appropriate tools and methods and to use them properly. Students have the ability to critically analyse as well as interpret sources and research literature and are able to present their evaluations suitably.
