Contents

Basic principles of the sub-subject intercultural communication; Knowledge and use of communication theory models; social action patterns; Socially relevant identity constructions in their functionality for the analysis of intercultural communication.

Intended learning outcomes

Students are familiar with the terminological principles, the central perspectives as well as fundamental literature of communication theories and are able to refer these skills in first approaches on an intercultural perspective. They increase their oral and written skills concerning the production and reception. They are also able to identify specific communication conditions and problems from an intercultural perspective. If required, they are able to think about optimisation possibilities concerning the cultural exchange and intercultural cooperation and initiate theoretically established and practically sensitised improvement strategies.
