Contents
With changing thematic focuses, the module exemplarily provides students with in-depth knowledge of the Auxiliary Sciences of History in the subject area of ancient or medieval history. The focus is on the development of the current state of research in the selected subject area. Questions and trends of research are reflected and discussed under the guidance of the lecturer. Students are encouraged to take a stand on research controversies and to justify their own position.
Intended learning outcomes
The students are provided with exemplarily in-depth, problem-oriented knowledge of the Auxiliary Sciences of History in the subject area of ancient or medieval history. They are able to research sources and specialist literature on a selected topic largely independently. With the support of the lecturer, they know how to work out and display the current state of research on the selected topic, to reflect and discuss questions and trends of research. They have learnt to differentiate between different research opinions, to comment on them and to justify their own position in a structured manner in oral and written form.
