Contents
The module covers three thematic contents, dealing with complex texts, technical language skills and advanced colloquial language. The language competence that the students have acquired in the 4th semester at Peking University is broadened. The students' reading skills are deepened by using selected texts that are characterised by specific content and style, as well as communicative practice of culture and subject-specific vocabulary. Further areas of competence are: reading and writing official documents as well as understanding formal texts; the passive and active dealing with official documents in the form of different text types is practised. Official language as well as forms of politeness are passively taught in various written contexts and actively practised.
Intended learning outcomes
The ability to develop stylistically more demanding texts and to discuss them in communicative exercises is practised. The ability to express oneself in writing with subject-specific vocabulary and appropriate written expression is practised. The students are able to present complex topics in Chinese.
