Contents
In this module, the specifics of Systematic Musicology are studied. Problems of academic theory such as the relationship between the Humanities and the Natural Sciences and between theory and practice are discussed. Furthermore, concepts such as system, paradigm and object of science, synchrony and diachrony are defined. On this basis, the reflection of the disciplinary framework of Systematic Musicology with its sub-disciplines acoustics, music theory, music aesthetics, music psychology, music sociology, music semiotics and musical logic will be carried out. Finally, the connection of Musicology to disciplines such as communication theory, media studies or systems theory will be shown.
Intended learning outcomes
The student has a deepened competence pertaining to the theory of science in the field of Systematic Musicology. He/she is able to develop and differentiate questions from the subject area and to outline methodically conscious solutions.
