Contents
In this course we transfer the principles of movement science to the possibilities of teaching core topics of movement pedagogy. We analyse the core topics of infantile movement in a phenomenological manner and examine these topics in view of teaching/learning processes.
Intended learning outcomes
The students acquire essential professional skills in reviewing fundamental movement topics in a conceptual manner. They are able to transfer these principles to various connections between sports and its didactic requirements for physical education in schools. Furthermore, they are able to critically evaluate current developments from this area. When it comes to didactics, the students know how to properly deal with central movement topics of basic movement and game forms.
