Contents
In this module we discuss the connections between ecological and sociocultural principles of exercising and outdoor sports in the area of recreational sports and trend sports. We evaluate these types of sports in view of their social and ecological structures and potentials in a pedagogical analysis whilst taking into account the interests of persons engaging in sports activities regarding movement and recreation. We critically evaluate and test exemplary types of sports in their near-natural environments in order to evaluate concepts of environmental education and outdoor sports and establish connections between these concepts.
Intended learning outcomes
The students have essential professional skills in reviewing and teaching connections between outdoor recreational and trend sports and sports ecology in a conceptual manner. They are able to transfer these principles to various connections of outdoor sports and to critically evaluate current developments in this area. Additionally, they are able to plan sports activities whilst taking into account possibilities to reasonably handle natural environmental resources.
