Contents
Recent developments in the research regarding diversity and inclusion, especially interreligious research, based on current scientific literature.
Intended learning outcomes
Students know the latest developments in the research regarding diversity and inclusion, especially interreligious research, and are able to reflect upon them. They are able to convey latest scientific publications according to the social requirements of egalitarian differences. Students will extend their knowledge of scientific, social and cultural problems. They acquire a more holistic point of view and are able to develop their own opinions regarding these problems in a responsible and independent manner.
