Contents
In regard to a profession in diversity management and by means of research literature and current publications, this course conveys basic ideas and concepts, scientific methods, models and approaches, and, especially theological argumentation strategies in the fields of economic and organizational ethics of diversity.
Intended learning outcomes
Students are able to name, outline, and distinguish different actions and professional fields of diversity management. They are able to reflect critically upon basic ideas, concepts, and problems of economic ethics focusing on egalitarian difference. Students acquire a more holistic point of view and are able to develop their own opinions regarding these problems in a responsible and independent manner. They can discuss the complex relationship between ethics and economy. They can evaluate the importance of economical and sustainable aspects of diversity projects.
