Contents
Theory and practical work are combined notably in this module. Theoretical concepts and methods in order to support development processes during childhood and youth are discussed. This knowledge is then applied to the practical educational work in the context of Service-Learning.
Intended learning outcomes
The students have broadened their understanding of scientific theories and methods to support adolescents and are able to apply these in a reflected way to current requirements of practical work. They are able to apply and analyse their newly learned knowledge to the benefit of social learning institutions.
