Contents
This module deals with complex topics of Educational Psychology and Developmental Psychology. It covers a wide range of specific topics which are geared towards current research fields. For example, it offers seminars dealing with personality development across the lifespan, development in middle and late adulthood, educational success in the context of bilingualism and migration as well as mindfulness regarding behavioural disorders. It builds upon the knowledge acquired during the Bachelor's degree and focuses on practical relevance.
Intended learning outcomes
The students advance their competencies acquired during the Bachelor's degree programme. They acquire profound, theoretical professional competencies in current practice- and research-oriented topic areas of Educational and Developmental Psychology. Therefore, the module prepares the students for different occupational activities, such as research activities in Educational and Developmental Psychology, psychological test diagnosis and (educational) counselling activities.
