| In the seminar on the Master's thesis, the students present the status of their work in the planning and results phase in written and oral form and thus have the opportunity to discuss and provide assistance with fellow students and experts in the respective research field.   |                              |   |
| Intended learning outcomes  |                              |   |
| The students' methodological and content-related knowledge of clinical psychology, psychotherapy or clinical neuroscience enables them based on the current state of the scientific literature to deduce a research question and write it down in an exposé. Before completing the work, the students also learn to present, discuss and defend their approach, the process and the results of their thesis. |                              |   |
