Contents
In this course we discuss the basics of functional anatomy as well as the musculoskeletal system and its overload and injury mechanisms. Furthermore, we survey possibilities and measures for individuals and groups to promote fitness and health. We examine central terms, theories, concepts, methods and models of movement science in the context of sporting activities. We especially focus on various scientific perspectives on movement learning and changes in coordination as well as resulting consequences for teaching and learning movement at and out of school whilst taking into account the target group.
Intended learning outcomes
The students have key professional skills in functional anatomy and sports traumatology. They are able to utilise these skills in a manner that is appropriate to the situation and audience in order to plan and conduct measures of health and fitness promotion for individuals and groups. Furthermore, the students have essential professional skills in the fields of movement science and movement learning. They can apply their knowledge about movement science as well as the methods of analysing movement and teaching physical education to various movement fields and types of sports and are able to estimate their importance for a holistic development promotion.
