Content and Objectives of the Programme

The M.A.-programme in Comparative Indo-European Linguistics is offered as research oriented programme. Its aim is to introduce the students to an in-depth-work with selected topics of Comparative Indo-European Linguistics on an advanced level, to enable them to identify research problems and desiderates and to independently develop solutions on the basis of a sound overview of the Indo-European Languages. By training these capabilities, the foundations for a Ph.D. programme in Comparative Indo-European Linguistics are laid.

The M.A.-programme in Comparative Indo-European Linguistics focuses on independent and critical reflection of Comparative Indo-European Linguistics research. Acquiring knowledge in certain fields within Comparative Indo-European Linguistics is conditioned by this goal.

The internationally comparable degree in the field of Comparative Indo-European Linguistics is the second degree within the consecutive Bachelor-Master's programme. Thus it qualifies for the start into a job outside the university. On the other hand it is the typical prerequisite for a ensuing Ph.D.-programme. The M.A.-programme in Comparative Indo-European Linguistics typically aims at the profession of an Indo-European Linguist who works in various research institutions, e. g. universities, and academies. To this end the studies for the Master's degree lays the foundations for a Ph.D., which qualifies for scholarly work. However, graduates of this programme should also be trained or have skills to work outside academia, e.g. in publishing houses, libraries, the diplomatic service, cultural management, media, museology, as well as diverse professions demanding general skills provided for in this study program.

For an academic career the necessary methodological and linguistic knowledge is taught in subject modules. Comparative Indo-European Linguistics is a subject which studies a great variety of sources and material remains stretching over 3000 years. Consequently it is impossible to introduce all specialized fields of the subject equally thoroughly. Therefore alongside the specialized basic linguistic competence students learn in this programme the methodological capability to make themselves familiar with a new and complex linguistic topic efficiently and quickly

Thus the graduate is familiar with and used to the phenomenon of permanent learning, to develop solutions by adequate methods. In addition he or she has a good knowledge in modern foreign languages, be it through courses in the field of key qualifications, be it in Comparative Indo-European Linguistics courses. Students of Comparative Indo-European Linguistics are required to read specialized literature in different languages, particularly in English, French, Italian, and Spanish, i.e. they are familiar to read difficult texts in languages other than their native language, to understand them and to gain the relevant information from them. At the same time they have to express their own findings in German as one of the major scholarly languages in Comparative Indo-European Linguistics in a differentiated and precise manner. By this they have developed linguistic flexibility and competence. Finally the graduate has a high degree of initiative and commitment to acquire meaningful and sound information.

Conventions

Unless otherwise stated, courses and assessments will be held in German, assessments will be offered every semester and modules are not creditable for bonus.

Notes

Should there be the option to choose between several methods of assessment, the lecturer will agree with the module coordinator on the method of assessment to be used in the current semester by two weeks after the start of the course at the latest and will communicate this in the customary manner.

Should the module comprise more than one graded assessment, all assessments will be equally weighted, unless otherwise stated below.

Should the assessment comprise several individual assessments, successful completion of the module will require successful completion of all individual assessments.

In accordance with the general regulations governing the degree subject described in this module catalogue:

ASPO2009

associated official publications (FSB (subject-specific provisions)/SFB (list of modules)):

28-Aug-2012 (2012-154)

This module handbook seeks to render, as accurately as possible, the data that is of statutory relevance according to the examination regulations of the degree subject. However, only the FSB (subject-specific provisions) and SFB (list of modules) in their officially published versions shall be legally binding. In the case of doubt, the provisions on, in particular, module assessments specified in the FSB/SFB shall prevail.

1. Modern theories of grammar. 2. The use and comparison of these theories in various areas of grammar, above all in syntax (e. g. tense, mood, aspect, adverbial relations [adverbs, case] and adnominal relations [prepositional phrases, modifier, apposition]). Various living languages will be used as the basis of this course depending on the language skills of the participants. 3. The history of linguistics from antiquity to the modern day. 4. The application of the four methods introduced in (4) to various languages belonging to different geographical and genetic groups (e. g. Turkish, Chinese, German, Latin, and Eskimo, among others) on the basis of an introductory overview of the grammar of the respective languages.
Intended learning outcomes
The students will be familiar with the current state of research and will be able to apply the theories and methods of comparative linguistics to different languages.

The module pursues the learning of the Middle Egyptian Language. Verbal forms will be covered in detail (esp. different aspects of the suffix conjugation) in order to finally acquire the first lecture experience with easier Egyptian texts.
Intended learning outcomes
Students gain first insights into the Egyptian grammar and the basic vocabulary of the Middle Egyptian Language. They are able to read simple hieroglyphic texts in the original Egyptian language by using basic tools.

The module is dedicated to reading more difficult Hittite texts from various developmental periods of the Hittite language. It conveys a representative overview of the development of the Hittite language and Hittite cuneiform writing, of the position of Hittite among the Indo-European languages and of the language contacts between Hittite and Luwian. Non-Hittite texts from the Hittite text corpus (especially cuneiform Luwian and hieroglyphic Luwian texts) can be incorporated into the curriculum. The reading of texts is central to the module; specific topics will be covered by individual student presentations.
Intended learning outcomes
The student will acquire a comprehensive overview of the development of Hittite and basic knowledge of the linguistic position of Hittite. He/she will acquire a deeper understanding of selected groups of Hittite texts with a particular regard to their language form. The student will be able to transliterate, translate and comment upon the texts assigned or read in class. He/she will acquire the ability to transliterate, translate and classify (with regard to content) more difficult Hittite texts beyond the class curriculum with the help of dictionaries and sign lists. He/she will acquire skills in other ancient Anatolian languages testified to in the Hittite text corpus, provided that these are incorporated into the curriculum.

The Sumerian language, which is not related to any other known language, is the oldest written language of the ancient Near East. This module gives an introduction to the grammar and vocabulary of Sumerian as well as to the cuneiform in which it was written; the knowledge to be acquired by the student is reinforced through the reading of simple Sumerian royal inscriptions. Emphasis is placed upon the Neo-Sumerian grammar, which is employed in the inscriptions of Gudea of Lagas and elsewhere.
The student will acquire an overview of the structure of the Sumerian language and especially of the criteria necessary for the analysis of forms as well as the ability to use the most important resources (grammars, dictionaries, bibliographies, text editions). He/she will be able (1) to create reasonable genitive constructions in different cases from given nouns and to translate these, (2) to combine given substantives with pronominal suffixes and case endings and to translate these, to analyse verbal forms and to translate these, (3) to read and translate simple royal inscriptions from the original cuneiform writing.

Akkadian, a member of the Semitic family of languages, was the most widespread language of the ancient Near East. Thus, the student must begin learning the language from the start of the programme. The module gives an introduction to reading Akkadian texts, with special emphasis on the Old Babylonian dialect. Sections of the Code of Hammurabi in Neo-Assyrian cuneiform as well as other selected Old Babylonian texts (documents, letters, omens) will be read in class. By means of these text examples, the student will become familiar with the cuneiform signs as well as with Old Babylonian cursive. On the basis of the texts, the student will also develop a knowledge of Old Babylonian history, especially the history of society and of law.
The student will acquire detailed knowledge of the structure of Akkadian and will be able to use this knowledge to independently read Akkadian texts. He/she will be able to transliterate, transcribe and translate texts from the Code of Hammurabi and other selected Old Babylonian texts and to give a grammatical analysis of these. In addition to the Neo-Assyrian form of cuneiform, the student will know the elementary signs of the Old Babylonian cursive and monumental script. He/she will be familiar with Old Babylonian history and, in particular, the history of society and law.
