Contents
The module is dedicated to reading non-literary ancient Near Eastern texts of the 1st millennium BC, especially letters, legal documents, administrative documents, royal inscriptions and historiographical texts, but also ancient Near Eastern scientific texts (medical, mathematical, etc.) or ritual texts from the context of the temple cult. Emphasis is placed upon reading Akkadian cuneiform texts from the various regions of the ancient Near East in the 1st millennium BC (especially Babylonia and Assyria); it can also be arranged to read texts of the 1st millennium BC in other ancient Near Eastern languages (e.g. hieroglyphic Luwian, old Aramaic or old Persian inscriptions). The linguistic form and the historical background of the texts read, including questions concerning the history of law, society, science and ideas, will be explained and discussed in class.
Intended learning outcomes
The student will acquire a comprehensive overview of the tradition of ancient Near Eastern documental texts of the 1st millennium BC. He/She will gain deeper knowledge of selected text groups and their historical background, including questions about the history of law, society, sciences and ideas. The student will have a good reading knowledge of the major dialects of Akkadian in the 1st millennium BC. Optionally, knowledge of non-Akkadian texts of the 1st millennium BC may also be acquired. He/She will be capable of transliterating and translating the texts assigned or read in class, and of commenting on both their content and form. He/She will acquire the ability to transliterate, translate and classify (with regard to content) more difficult Akkadian texts of the 1st millennium BC beyond the class curriculum with the help of dictionaries and sign lists.

The module is dedicated to reading ancient Near Eastern texts of the 3rd millennium BC, encompassing both literary and non-literary texts. Emphasis is normally placed, on the one hand, upon Old Akkadian texts of various genres and, on the other, upon the Sumerian tradition of the 3rd millennium, especially the Old Sumerian period (Early Dynastic IIIb) and the Ur III period. The cuneiform tradition of the late 4th and early 3rd millennia up to the F?ra-period can be integrated into the curriculum. The linguistic form and the historical background of the texts read, including questions concerning the history of law, society, religion, sciences and ideas, will be explained and discussed in class. Individual text groups, especially archaic and proto-cuneiform texts, can be addressed in individual student presentations.
Intended learning outcomes

The module is dedicated to more difficult Akkadian texts from various periods and regions of the ancient Near East. It conveys a representative overview of the development of Akkadian based on selected reading examples (especially Assyrian and Babylonian, but also different forms of so-called 'Peripheral Akkadian'), of the position of Akkadian among the Semitic languages and of the language contacts between Akkadian and other languages of the ancient Near East. The reading of texts is central to the module; specific topics will be covered by individual student presentations.
Intended learning outcomes
The student will acquire a comprehensive overview of the development of Akkadian from the 3rd and into the 1st millennium BC as well as basic knowledge of the linguistic position of Akkadian. He/She will acquire a deepened understanding of selected text groups from the history of the Akkadian language, especially with regard to their language form. The student will be capable of transliterating, translating and commenting upon the texts assigned or read in class. He/She will acquire the ability to transliterate, translate and classify (with regard to content) more difficult Akkadian texts beyond the curriculum of the class with the help of dictionaries and sign lists.
