Content and Objectives of the Programme

Within their course of studies focusing on fundamentals and application, students of Music Education get familiar with general involvement in scientific knowledge and with the most important methods in the field as well as practice-related skills, thus creating the basis for a professional career in music communication. In this sense, the course of studies provides insight into fundamental issues of Music Education with its sub- and auxiliary disciplines and also into methods of communicating music and enables to qualify for well-grounded work in pedagogical context such as Music Education practice, Music Education Research and areas of Management and Communication. Graduates thereby create strategies and perspectives for present and future challenges. A broad range of courses, oriented on Music Education Studies in applied and in social and cultural contexts, leads to fundamental competences in Music Education theory and practice and provides options for individual profiling.

The Bachelor's degree programme also fulfils requirements for an internationally recognised degree in the field of Music Education and represents a first qualification for professional work.

As Music Education has to fulfil varied communication tasks, graduates of this programme acquire sensitivity for the many facets of their subject and for constantly changing shapes of professional activity: they are encouraged to seek new paths and to place appropriate accents reflecting their own creativity and conceptual sustainability. Corresponding modules support this aim, illuminating the spectrum of such areas of activity and professional engagement and examining them in greater depth in special courses. The insights thus gained are exercised initially in individually selected and professionally supervised practical activities; at later stages, it is possible to plan independently and carry out one's own project, aligned on particular personal interests. Documentation and evaluation take the form of a portfolio, which can form the basis of the thesis and which, after certification, contributes to the profiling of the student involved.

The range of possible professional activities extends from early childhood music education, adult education and work with senior citizens to museum pedagogy and exhibition didactics, including concert pedagogics, from music educationally relevant special areas in culture promotion and pedagogics to participation in sectors of music management or in cultural and educational politics. At the same time, the Bachelor programme represents a qualification for entry to a Master's course in Music Education or to other Master's courses with musical, cultural, media-related or pedagogical emphasis.

Conventions

Unless otherwise stated, courses and assessments will be held in German, assessments will be offered every semester and modules are not creditable for bonus.

Notes

Should there be the option to choose between several methods of assessment, the lecturer will agree with the module coordinator on the method of assessment to be used in the current semester by two weeks after the start of the course at the latest and will communicate this in the customary manner.

Should the module comprise more than one graded assessment, all assessments will be equally weighted, unless otherwise stated below.

Should the assessment comprise several individual assessments, successful completion of the module will require successful completion of all individual assessments.

In accordance with the general regulations governing the degree subject described in this module catalogue:

In this module, sources, musical evidence and cultural-historical conditions of European music history from the early modern period (around 1420) to the Enlightenment and their music-historiographical interpretation are studied. The three courses, which are coordinated in terms of content, deal with persons, phenomena and processes of music history. Using significant examples, the basics of specific methods of the humanities (such as philological, descriptive, comparative and analytical working methods) and of speaking about music (such as specialist terminology and use of metaphor) are taught, reflected and practised.
Intended learning outcomes
The student has basic knowledge of European music history from the early modern period to the Enlightenment, its sources and its phenomena. The student is able to classify this knowledge in historical contexts. The student is able to present and interpret music-historical phenomena appropriately on this basis.

Contents
In this module, students are provided with the basics of correct and independent work on questions and subject matters of music research. In the two courses, which will be coordinated in terms of content, basic musicological working techniques are taught and practiced, in particular research (databases, bibliographies, subject-specific types of sources), bibliography (primary and secondary sources) and citation. The understanding of the content, structure and meaning of scholarly texts will be developed, tested and reflected. The written and oral presentation of academic results will be theoretically studied and practised in practice.
Intended learning outcomes
The student has knowledge of the subject-specific research tools and methods and the academic formal requirements as the basis of correct academic work. He/she is able to classify, understand and reflect academic texts and to reproduce their essential contents. The student is able to present academic findings according to the rules of good scientific practice in a structured manner and appropriately to the requirements of the content, both orally and in writing.

Contents
In this module, the basic conditions of the relationship between music and text as well as music as text in European music are studied. In the two courses, which are coordinated in terms of content, the focus is first of all on the different strategies of the musicalisation of texts from the Middle Ages to the present day under the provisions of declamation, verse, speech-sound, phrase and syntax as well as the possibilities of text-generated musical semantics. Subsequently, specific musical reading skills will be practised on the basis of exemplary scores and the understanding of different typefaces of written music.
Intended learning outcomes
The student has basic experiences of the relationship between music and language as well as the resulting musical compositions and genres. He/she is able to read scores appropriately and to classify them historically as well as to describe and interpret musical textures.
