Contents
The module will present formal characteristics concerning the structure of human language, however, the focus lies on the linguistic analysis of the English language. Core areas of the language, such as phonetics (the articulatory and acoustic elements of phonemes), phonology (the systematic distribution of phonemes), morphology (structure of words and word formation), syntax (categories and rules that underlie sentences), semantics (importance of words and sentences), as well as pragmatics (content and function of statements concerning context and communication), will be discussed and analysed against the background of linguistic variation between speaker and language communities as well as against the background of historical linguistic developments.

Intended learning outcomes
After successful completion of the module, students are able to: (a) understand basic linguistic terms and concepts; (b) identify, classify and compare language structures with the help of linguistic concepts and terms; (c) analyse basic language structures on the level of sounds, the word and the phrase; and to generate and critically look on general findings concerning the internal organisation of language; (d) develop an understanding of the structure of the English language from a cross-language as well as sociolinguistic and historical perspective; (e) understand the function and use of language in a context as well as to understand the interfaces between different areas of the grammar;

Introduction to literary studies. Students can choose between the introduction to English or American literary studies. The English Studies provide students with basics of literature science-based theory and methodology as well as with basics skills in literary history of the British Isles. Moreover, due to the introduction to English literature, students will gain insights into new anglophone literatures. In order to apply these skills, students will practise the analysis and interpretation of selected texts of all literary genres from the early modern era up to the present. The American Studies introduce to the techniques of literature interpretation as well as to central literary theories and methods, by providing an example of the US-American literature and referring to all literary genres.

Intended learning outcomes
Students will be provided with specific basic knowledge and literary methodology, with the ability to apply literary theories and methods to the text analysis, basic knowledge of historical and idea-historical backgrounds and developments. After successful completion of the module, students are able to analyse, understand and evaluate literary and literary-historical phenomena with the terminology of the English or American literature.

Contents

On the basis of contemporary literature, the module will cover the history and development of the English language from its beginning in the fifth century up to modern times. Next to the linguistic description of earlier language levels (Old English, Middle English and Early Modern English) regarding phonology, morphology, syntax and vocabulary, the change of the language will be discussed in a socio-historical context and the characteristics of the modern English will be ascribed to the historical development.

Intended learning outcomes

After successful completion of the module, students are able to:
(a) identify, classify and compare linguistic structures in different language levels;
(b) understand and explain the structure of modern English against the background of the (linguistic) historical development;
(c) translate medieval and early modern texts and to classify them into their linguistic-historical and cultural context;
(d) understand the mechanisms of the language change and the complex interaction of linguistic and extralinguistic factors as well as to apply this knowledge to recent developments in the English language.

The module will consolidate skills in core areas of linguistics by applying, reviewing and evaluating linguistic theories and models. In the area of "Applied Linguistics", linguistic structures will be analysed concerning their different linguistic levels, taking into consideration the regional, social and text type dependent variation. Next to the dealing with methods of the language acquisition and the research of language contact, the complex coherences between internal and extralinguistic factors for language variation will be analysed and discussed.

Intended learning outcomes
(a) Students identify and classify linguistic structures into the core area of linguistics; (b) They compare and critically deal with issues, models and theories of the linguistic description; (c) The students observe and evaluate methods and results of the studies concerning the linguistic structure and language variety; (d) Students develop own ideas and strategies for analysing linguistic structures and their correlation with other intra- or extralinguistic factors; (e) They apply text and corpus-based methods to the analysis of linguistic material; (f) Students develop awareness of linguistic variation and its function in the context of discourse and society.
