Content and Objectives of the Programme

The B.A.-programme in Ancient Near Eastern Studies aims at the student's introduction to the principal fields of Ancient Near Eastern Studies, at teaching him or her the methods of work in Ancient Near Eastern Studies and at giving him or her a thorough overview of the Ancient Near Eastern Languages. Important is that the student has acquired a solid knowledge of important ancient Near Eastern languages. Therefore he/ she is able to decipher, read and understand original textual sources by him- or herself. Through developing these capabilities the foundations for the consecutive Master's programme in Ancient Near Eastern Studies are laid.

The B.A.-programme in Ancient Near Eastern Studies focuses on a thorough basic linguistic knowledge, in scholarly methods and the understanding of grammar and language structure of the Ancient Near Eastern languages. The learning of individual ancient Near/Middle Eastern languages is the basis for this. In addition, skills in Ancient Near Eastern history and culture are offered.

The B.A.-thesis demonstrates that the graduate is able to deal with a thematically limited problem of Ancient Near Eastern Studies within a certain given time span according to the taught methods and according to scholarly standards. He/ she has mostly independently written the thesis under limited supervision.

The internationally comparable degree in the field of Ancient Near Eastern Studies is the first degree within the consecutive Bachelor-Master's programme. Thus it qualifies for both the start into a job outside the university and the enrolment for the following master's programme.

The B.A.-programme in Ancient Near Eastern Studies typically aims at the profession of an Assyriologist, Sumerologist or Hittitologist who works in various research institutions, e. g. universities, and academies. For this the studies for the Bachelor's degree lay foundations for a Master's degree which is a further step to qualify for scholarly work. However, graduates of this programme should also be trained or have skills for further education for working outside academia, e.g. in publishing houses, libraries, diplomatic service, cultural management, media, museology, as well as diverse/other professions demanding general competence skills provided for in this programme of study.

For an academic career the necessary methodological and linguistic knowledge is taught in subject modules. Ancient Near Eastern Studies is a subject which studies a great variety of sources and material remains stretching over 3000 years. As it is impossible to introduce to all specialized fields of the subject equally thoroughly, in the B.-A.-programme students learn the specialized basic linguistic competence and the methodological capability to make themselves familiar with a new and complex Ancient Near Eastern topic efficiently and quickly.

Thus the graduate is familiar with and used to permanent learning and to develop solutions by adequate methods. In addition he/ she has good skills in modern foreign languages, by courses of the subject modules in the field of key qualifications and by Ancient Near Eastern Studies' courses. A student of Ancient Near Eastern Studies is required to read specialized literature in different languages, particularly in English, as well as in French, Italian, and Spanish, i.e. he/ she is familiar to read difficult texts in languages other than his/ her native idiom, to understand them and to gain the relevant information from them. At the same time he/ she has to express his/ her own scientific findings in German, the major scholarly language in Ancient Near Eastern Studies, in a differentiated and precise manner. So he/ she has developed linguistic flexibility and competence. Additionally, the graduate shows initiative and has the commitment to get sound information.

Other: A = thesis, LV = course(s), PL = assessment(s), TN = participants, VL = prerequisite(s)

Conventions

Unless otherwise stated, courses and assessments will be held in German, assessments will be offered every semester and modules are not creditable for bonus.

Notes

Should there be the option to choose between several methods of assessment, the lecturer will agree with the module coordinator on the method of assessment to be used in the current semester by two weeks after the start of the course at the latest and will communicate this in the customary manner.

Should the module comprise more than one graded assessment, all assessments will be equally weighted, unless otherwise stated below.

Should the assessment comprise several individual assessments, successful completion of the module will require successful completion of all individual assessments.

In accordance with the general regulations governing the degree subject described in this module catalogue:

ASPO2007

associated official publications (FSB (subject-specific provisions)/SFB (list of modules)):

26-Mar-2009 (2009-10)

This module handbook seeks to render, as accurately as possible, the data that is of statutory relevance according to the examination regulations of the degree subject. However, only the FSB (subject-specific provisions) and SFB (list of modules) in their officially published versions shall be legally binding. In the case of doubt, the provisions on, in particular, module assessments specified in the FSB/SFB shall prevail.

| This module gives an overview of the history of ancient Western Asia from the beginnings of "civilisation" in southern Mesopotamia in the middle of the 4th millennium BC to the end of the Neo-Babylonian empire in 539 BC. The available source material makes Southern Mesopotamia the main focus of the course, but Southwest Iran and Syria as well as, from the early 2nd millennium onwards, Anatolia will also be taken into account. Special attention will be paid to the critical analysis of sources. The module will discuss the history and topography of an important and thoroughly excavated ancient Near Eastern city, such as Babylon, Assur, Kalhu, Mari, Ugarit or Hattusa. | | |
| Intended learning outcomes | | |
| The student will develop the ability to critically review historical texts of the ancient Near East. He/she will acquire an overview of the periodisation of the history of the ancient Near East as well as of the major dates in the political history of the ancient Near East. In addition, the student will acquire an in-depth knowledge of the history and topography of a city in the ancient Near East. | | |
