Bachelor's degree programme with 2 majors, English and American Studies (2016)
Content and Objectives of the Programme

The Bachelor degree »English and American Studies« deals with the language and literature of the English-speaking world. It conveys expertise in the fields of English language and grammar, English and American literature, English and American culture, and English linguistics. In the course of their studies, students will receive specialized academic training in Anglophone Studies, deepen their English-language proficiency and enhance their analytical skills. This program of study is designed to prepare students for a wide range of employment opportunities upon completion of the degree. As a first job-qualifying degree, the Bachelor »English and American Studies« responds to the demands of today's working environment as many professional fields require a sophisticated knowledge and understanding of languages as well as highly developed cultural and academic competences. Additionally, the Bachelor »English and American Studies« may qualify for various Master degree programs. The program encompasses subject-related qualifications (including skills and competences) in the following areas: proficiency in speaking and reading the English language as well as producing complex English texts, an overview of selected themes and research areas of the field of English and American studies, abilities to critically engage with linguistic problems, to analyze and interpret literary, linguistic and culturally relevant texts in their historical and intellectual dimensions, methodologies of and approaches to literary and cultural studies and linguistics, analytical as well as research skills and familiarization with linguistic and/or literary and cultural developments specific to the English-speaking world, fundamental aspects of linguistics (e.g. syntax, morphology, semantics, pragmatics, phonology, phonetics), fundamental aspects of English and North American literature, including their historical and cultural backgrounds.

Contents

The module will present formal characteristics concerning the structure of human language, however, the focus lies on the linguistic analysis of the English language. Core areas of the language, such as phonetics (the articulatory and acoustic elements of phonemes), phonology (the systematic distribution of phonemes), morphology (structure of words and word formation), syntax (categories and rules that underlie sentences), semantics (importance of words and sentences), as well as pragmatics (content and function of statements concerning context and communication), will be discussed and analysed against the background of linguistic variation between speaker and language communities as well as against the background of historical linguistic developments.

Intended learning outcomes

After successful completion of the module, students are able to: (a) understand basic linguistic terms and concepts; (b) identify, classify and compare language structures with the help of linguistic concepts and terms; (c) analyse basic language structures on the level of sounds, the word and the phrase; and to generate and critically look on general findings concerning the internal organisation of language; (d) develop an understanding of the structure of the English language from a cross-language as well as sociolinguistic and historical perspective; (e) understand the function and use of language in a context as well as to understand the interfaces between different areas of the grammar.

Contents

Introduction to literary studies. Students can choose between the introduction to English or American literary studies. The English Studies provide students with basics of literature science-based theory and methodology as well as with basics skills in literary history of the British Isles. Moreover, due to the introduction to English literature, students will gain insights into new anglophone literatures. In order to apply these skills, students will practise the analysis and interpretation of selected texts of all literary genres from the early modern era up to the present. The American Studies introduce to the techniques of literature interpretation as well as to central literary theories and methods, by providing an example of the US-American literature and referring to all literary genres.

Intended learning outcomes

Students will be provided with specific basic knowledge and literary methodology, with the ability to apply literary theories and methods to the text analysis, basic knowledge of historical and idea-historical backgrounds and developments. After successful completion of the module, students are able to analyse, understand and evaluate literary and literary-historical phenomena with the terminology of the English or American literature.

Contents

The module provides students with an overview of an object of literary and cultural studies. This can be either:

- a) a literary epoch with their central authors, texts, genres and cultural contexts (e.g. early modern era, restoration drama, development of a novel, satire), or
- b) a cultural science-based issue on the basis of textual, visual and other media (e.g. film noir, adaptation, graphic novels, TV series), or
- c) an academic method (e.g. post-colonial studies, memory studies, trauma studies).

Intended learning outcomes

Students get an overview of a complex technical object. This object should be consolidated by accompanying reading matter independently.

Contents
On the basis of contemporary literature, the module will cover the history and development of the English language from its beginning in the fifth century up to modern times. Next to the linguistic description of earlier language levels (Old English, Middle English and Early Modern English) regarding phonology, morphology, syntax and vocabulary, the change of the language will be discussed in a socio-historical context and the characteristics of the modern English will be ascribed to the historical development.

Intended learning outcomes
After successful completion of the module, students are able to:
(a) identify, classify and compare linguistic structures in different language levels;
(b) understand and explain the structure of modern English against the background of the (linguistic) historical development;
(c) translate medieval and early modern texts and to classify them into their linguistic-historical and cultural context;
(d) understand the mechanisms of the language change and the complex interaction of linguistic and extralinguistic factors as well as to apply this knowledge to recent developments in the English language.

Contents
The module will consolidate skills in core areas of linguistics by applying, reviewing and evaluating linguistic theories and models. In the area of “Applied Linguistics”, linguistic structures will be analysed concerning their different linguistic levels, taking into consideration the regional, social and text type dependent variation. Next to the dealing with methods of the language acquisition and the research of language contact, the complex coherences between internal and extralinguistic factors for language variation will be analysed and discussed.

Intended learning outcomes
(a) Students identify and classify linguistic structures into the core area of linguistics; (b) They compare and critically deal with issues, models and theories of the linguistic description; (c) The students observe and evaluate methods and results of the studies concerning the linguistic structure and language variety; (d) Students develop own ideas and strategies for analysing linguistic structures and their correlation with other intra- or extralinguistic factors; (e) They apply text and corpus-based methods to the analysis of linguistic material; (f) Students develop awareness of linguistic variation and its function in the context of discourse and society.

On an advanced level, review seminars will be offered, which will, on the one hand, present different areas of Applied Linguistics or different structural description levels of the English language from a typological view; on the other hand, offer seminars that focus on a current research area of linguistics; the main focus can be selected methodologically (for example corpus linguistics or empirical linguistics).

Intended learning outcomes

Students acquire detailed knowledge of a linguistic focus (content-related and/or methodological nature) and are able to summarise and critically look at current research of linguistics; they broaden their knowledge concerning the identification and analysis of English linguistic phenomena into selected linguistic data and become aware of the relevance of linguistics and its importance for society; as a first step, they are instructed to conduct research on their own.

Contents

In this module, students are expected to prepare for their Bachelor's thesis. Objective is a solid development of a literary or cultural science-based issue, taking into account the current state of research. The Bachelor's thesis proves that students are able to develop hypotheses and to verify them on the basis of textual or visual objects, based on a specialist issue.

Intended learning outcomes

Students learn to understand and present the state of research concerning an issue as well as to develop and argumentatively present an own issue on this basis. They train their skills of researching research ideas, present them in writing and critically refer to them.

Contents

Basically, the course provides students of all semesters with the ability to create literary texts in the English and German language autonomously. Dialogically structured and thematically instructed sessions provide the possibility to discuss and improve own texts and to be able to gain theoretical as well as practical insights into the everyday workshop of creative writing. Under methodological supervision, writing exercises will facilitate a performative access to the linguistic expression and will motivate to form an own aesthetic idiom.

Intended learning outcomes

Students acquire basic knowledge of aesthetic construction regarding literary texts (lyrics, prose, scenic dialogues) as well as basics concerning the significance of a reading-orientated practice of literary writing. The self-confidence concerning own skills of writing structural texts will be increased.
