Content and Objectives of the Programme

The course pursues the goal of laying the foundations of the subject by scientific study of German language and literature. The studies in German cover these individual points:

- An overview of the history of German literature from the beginnings to the present in the context of the history of European literature, thought and culture
- Fundamentals of evaluation and mediation of literary texts on methodical principles
- Basic knowledge of current and historical theories of literature
- Basic knowledge in the fundamental disciplines rhetoric, poetics/aesthetics, narratology
- Awareness of the problems of a scientific fixing of terminology (epochs, genres, methodologies)
- Competence in reading and translating earlier forms of German
- Awareness of the problem of alterity in medieval literature
- Ability to reflect on literary texts in their artificiality and historical context
- Ability to delineate appropriately contextual relationships in both oral and written forms and using relevant media to present them suitably to a target group
- Fundamental knowledge of the different systematic levels of the German language (phonetics/phonology, graphematics, morphology, syntax, semantics, pragmatics)
- An overview of the most important historical lines of development in the German language in both the German language (Old High German, Middle High German, Early Modern High German) and in relation to historical sectional views of tendencies in phonetics/phonology, graphematics, morphology, syntax, semantics and pragmatics
- Developing an awareness of question complexes, investigational methods and theoretical approaches in linguistics
- Basic knowledge of the most important research paradigms in current German linguistics
- Ability to recognise, analyse and reflect on present-day use of language in its various manifestations in the media with the help of a pool of linguistic methods
- Ability to recognise historical texts, to place them chronologically, geographically and socially and to reflect appropriately on their source situation with the help of the available methods of historical linguistics

Contents
Within the lecture, this module aims to provide an overview and first introduction to the important parts of German linguistics. At the same time, the seminar that is a part of the module, provides students with analytical and description methods up to the word level, for example morphological segmentation and classification of individual word forms into basic morphemes, morphology and inflectional morphemes, morphological and semantic analysis of word formation structures, phonetic and phonological transcription in International Phonetic Alphabet (IPA)-phonetics, graphical realisation of phonemes and associated with orthography principles. The associated tutorial helps to practise further and to become more confident with the analytical and description methods, acquired in the seminar.
Intended learning outcomes
Students possess an overview of the discipline German linguistics and its individual subdisciplines. They are able to describe and analyse linguistic units up to the word level assuredly. Thanks to the module, students are familiar with the basic analytical and description techniques of linguistics, which will be extended and consolidated in the following modules.

Within the lecture, this module aims to provide an overview of the German syntax with focus on the valency grammatical sentence analysis, e.g. determining clauses by the use of grammatical samples, determining valency depending and non-depending clauses, syntactical function and semantics of relative clauses, formal description of the structure of complex sentences. During this module, which is a part of the seminar, students will practise the analytical and description methods, covered during the lecture, by authentic sentences. This module will start with the analysis of simple sentences, then goes over to levels of clauses and will continue with the analysis of difficult sentences up to sub-levels. The tutorial, which is a part of the module, provides further practise and students will be confident with the covered description and analytical methods.
Intended learning outcomes
Students possess solid knowledge of the sub-area syntax with focus on valency grammar, they are able to identify and determine syntactic structures and are acquainted with the description and analysis of linguistic units up to the sentence level assuredly.

Students will be introduced to subdisciplines of German studies. Additionally, sub-subject comprehensive fundamental questions will be covered, such as: What is a sign? What is a text? What is an author? What are media? What is communication? What do rhetoric, poetics, aesthetics mean? Moreover, fundamental methods of literary work with texts of German literature from its beginnings to the present will be covered and students will be familiar with important introductory literature.
Intended learning outcomes
Students possess an overview of basic questions of German science and their subdisciplines. They are able to question the language in general and in particular literature concerning fundamental elements.

Contents
Information literacy in an academic context: - Search strategies and tools. - Using the library's electronic resources. - Resources for subjects offered by the Faculty of Arts: bibliographies, databases, catalogues, journals, reference books. - Online searches and search engines. - Overview of additional resources (eLearning etc.). - Reference management. Some sections of the module will focus on particular disciplines (wherever possible, on disciplines within in the Faculty of Arts). Although we will not discuss all subject-specific resources in class, students will become familiar with the resources for their two degree subjects in their independent study time.
Intended learning outcomes
Students know what information is needed for what purpose. They are able to locate information that is relevant within their disciplines and beyond in a variety of resources and to evaluate this information. They recognise the difference in quality between information they have retrieved from specific, restricted access resources (databases) and information they have found on the free web. Students are able to manage and process the information they have found, using reference management software and eLearning tools. The module aims to equip students with the skills needed to find information and literature that is relevant to the topics of their Bachelor's theses.

Duration	Module level	Other prerequisites
1 semester	undergraduate	Admission prerequisite to assessment: regular attendance of courses.
Contents
The tutorial deals with the practise of writing: How do I urge a good argument? How far does a smart wording distinguish from an awkward one? When does a sentence is not only correct, but also nice and smart? What do you need to know if the intelligibility of a text should be ensured? How does a text receives argumentative density and rhetorical subtlety? The writing will exemplarily be practised on subjects that are relevant to the discipline, for example: How a recension about a subject book is written, how is the discussion of an evening of theatre or a literary novelty is written?
Intended learning outcomes
Concerning the sub-module argumentation and formulation: Students have the ability to formulate and argue as well as the ability to structure texts; Additionally, they will acquire stylistic, argumentative and structural basic principles of important text and linguistic levels.

One of the following sub-modules must be chosen. The sub-module EDP-Philology gives an overview of the discipline of digital humanities, the imparting of fundamental methods of digital humanities - abstraction, formalisation - and their use in the data modelling. Additionally, the module gives an overview of principles of the text encoding and relevant encoding systems (e.g. TEI) and design of digital editions, corpora and information systems as well as an overview of typical application methods of digital humanities in the humanities. The sub-module media gives an overview of the mediality of language and literature in a synchronic and diachronic view, particularly of the competition of different media (orality/textuality), the media change (e.g. handwriting/printing) and the consequences of mediality on the methods of literary production and reception.
Intended learning outcomes
Concerning the sub-module EDP philology: Students are able to use chosen methods of digital humanities in the humanities. Concerning the sub-module media: Students know how to deal with different media. They are able to describe and explain the media change and to analyse media appropriately.
