Content and Objectives of the Programme

The study of Greek Philology as a Bachelor main subject offers, besides the learning of general skills in information acquisition and data collection, a well-grounded linguistic training in Classical Greek as well as a combined subject profile. The resulting linguistic competence comprises the areas grammar, translation skills and text comprehension. The programme profile includes modules in linguistics, literature studies and classical studies or general cultural studies.

The Bachelor main subject Greek Philology is built on a foundation of fundamental linguistic knowledge; the learning outcome is a wide-ranging competence in analytical/hermeneutic approaches to literary texts ranging from the Greek Classical Period to characteristic examples of their reception in Antiquity, the Middle Ages and the Modern Period. In the process, the student will become familiar with specialist electronic auxiliary material (TLG, Perseus/Tufts, other data bases for classical studies) and with perspectives in inter-disciplinary research. The training in forms of research and presentation during studies (portfolio, written thesis with presentation, semester paper) is applicable in every career area connected in the most general way with the acquisition, processing and communication of information, while (besides university work) the traditional career opportunities include of course publishing, adult education, culture management etc. A departmental speciality, reflected in the programme of studies, is the relationship between literature and philosophical argument, which also involves questions of the circumstances and materials of textual transmission. The experience acquired in work on and editing of classical textual evidence using modern methods and auxiliary materials based on the latest research are of fundamental importance for a further academic career or in academic publishing.

The competence acquired by students in evaluating and contextualizing the chronologically distant knowledge transmitted in the literatures of Greece is equally applicable to other unfamiliar intellectual materials which lie beyond the horizon of their everyday experience. A special focus, already mentioned above, is on text transmission, in this case particularly on philosophical writings on papyrus. Experience with texts of the various philosophical schools of Greek antiquity contributes to competence in evaluating and categorizing current ethical questions in the light of classical thought. By referring to reception phenomena of various epochs, these structures also become transparent in a diachronic perspective, thus training the capacity for (inter-)cultural transfer. With its key chronological position, the subject represents an ideal basis for a deeper understanding not only of the literature of Europe but also of its cultures and especially its cross-border phenomena (oriental roots of Greek thought, the expansion of Greek culture in Hellenism, the function of Greek culture within the Roman Empire etc.). This kind of deeper understanding of European culture is also a prerequisite for any intercultural discourse going beyond the European horizon.

The graduate of this programme obtains an overview of the relationships in the fundamentals of Greek Philology and is equipped to apply the scientific methods learned. The successful completion of the programme represents the acquisition of an internationally comparable degree in the field of Greek Philology as part of a consecutive Bachelor and Master programme and forms a first professional recognition; this meets at the same time the entry requirements for the ensuing Master programme.

Akkadian, which belongs to the Semitic family of languages, was the most widespread language of the ancient Near East. Thus, the student must begin learning the language from the start of the programme. This module provides the student with an overview of the writing systems and languages of the ancient Near East and acquaints them with the fundamental principles of scholarly work. The module introduces the student to cuneiform as well as to Akkadian grammar and vocabulary, with special emphasis on the Old Babylonian dialect.

Intended learning outcomes

The student will become familiar with the structure of the Akkadian language and especially with the criteria necessary for the analysis of forms.
He/she will be able
(1) to create reasonable genitive constructions (in bound transcription) from given nouns and to translate these,
(2) to combine given substantives with pronominal suffixes and to translate these,
(3) to render verbal forms given in transliteration with a bound transcription, to analyse and to translate these forms,
(4) to name the phonetic values of simple cuneiform signs,
(5) to read the Code of Hammurabi from the Neo-Assyrian cuneiform writing, to correctly render it with a bound transcription, to translate it as well as to analyse the verbal forms.
The student will acquire the ability to use the most important resources (grammars, dictionaries, bibliographies, text editions) and will be familiar with the fundamental religious, legal and social principles underlying the Code of Hammurabi as well as with the most important provisions of family law.

Hittite, which is the earliest attested language of the Indo-European family of languages, was written in Babylonian cuneiform. Thus, the Hittite culture forms an established component of the cuneiform culture. The module gives an introduction to the grammar and vocabulary of the Hittite language as well as the cuneiform in which it was written, and reinforces the acquired knowledge with the reading of simple Hittite historical texts.

Intended learning outcomes

The student will acquire an overview of the structure of the Hittite language and especially of the criteria necessary for the analysis of forms as well as the ability to use the most important resources (grammars, dictionaries, bibliographies, text editions).
He/she will be able
(1) to attach possessive suffixes to nouns and to decline these,
(2) to analyse and translate verb forms,
(3) to analyse conjunctions with enclitics,
(4) to construct logical sentences from given lexemes and to translate these,
(5) to transliterate, analyse and translate Hittite annalistic cuneiform texts from the previous programme and will acquire a good basic knowledge of the historical-cultural background of the texts in question.

The Sumerian language, which is not related to any other known language, is the oldest written language of the ancient Near East. This module gives an introduction to the grammar and vocabulary of Sumerian as well as to the cuneiform in which it was written; the knowledge to be acquired by the student is reinforced through the reading of simple Sumerian texts. Emphasis is placed upon the Neo-Sumerian grammar, which is employed in the inscriptions of Gudea of Lagas and elsewhere.

Intended learning outcomes

The student will acquire an overview of the structure of the Sumerian language and especially of the criteria necessary for the analysis of forms as well as the ability to use the most important resources (grammars, dictionaries, bibliographies, text editions).
He/she will be able
(1) to create reasonable genitive constructions in different cases from given nouns and to translate these,
(2) to combine given substantives with pronominal suffixes and case endings and to translate these, to analyse verbal forms and to translate these,
(3) to read and translate simple royal inscriptions from the original cuneiform writing and
(4) to analyse verbal forms given in transliteration from more difficult texts.

This module equips students with fundamental knowledge about ancient history. It provides an overview of ancient history and discusses selected examples. The courses explore key problems in and sources of ancient history.

Intended learning outcomes

Students gain an overview of major developments in ancient history and consolidate their knowledge of one or more themes or periods, taking a range of aspects into account (e. g. politics, the economy, society, culture, ideas, or mentalities). They are able to consider this/these theme(s) or period(s) in a general historical context and to identify interdependencies. Students are able to take aspects of the history of Europe and beyond into account. They are able to select and employ appropriate tools and methods. Students are able to critically analyse and interpret sources and academic literature as well as to present their findings in an appropriate manner.

Bachelor's thesis: With the help of academic methods, students will deal with a specific problem within a fixed period of time, which is determined by the ASPO. In the case of a Bachelor with two main disciplines, an issue can be given that covers a problem that affects both main disciplines interdisciplinarily. The topic is to be agreed upon with an authorised examiner or, in the case of an interdisciplinary thesis, 2 authorised examiners.

Intended learning outcomes

Students are able to work on a specific issue of Greek Philosophy with the help of academic methods and are able to present their results appropriately in written form.

Information literacy in an academic context:
- Search strategies and tools.
- Using the library's electronic resources.
- Resources for subjects offered by the Faculty of Arts: bibliographies, databases, catalogues, journals, reference books.
- Online searches and search engines.
- Overview of additional resources (eLearning etc.).
- Reference management. Some sections of the module will focus on particular disciplines (wherever possible, on disciplines within in the Faculty of Arts). Although we will not discuss all subject-specific resources in class, students will become familiar with the resources for their two degree subjects in their independent study time.

Intended learning outcomes

Students know what information is needed for what purpose. They are able to locate information that is relevant within their disciplines and beyond in a variety of resources and to evaluate this information. They recognise the difference in quality between information they have retrieved from specific, restricted access resources (databases) and information they have found on the free web. Students are able to manage and process the information they have found, using reference management software and eLearning tools. The module aims to equip students with the skills needed to find information and literature that is relevant to the topics of their Bachelor's theses.
