Content and Objectives of the Programme

In the Bachelor programme European Ethnology / Cultural Anthropology as a main subject (85 ECTS), students acquire knowledge in a cultural science which uses historical, empirical and comparative methods, has a sociological and socio-historical orientation and is concerned with everyday life, culture and way of life of broad sections of the population of Europe from medieval times to the present. From the wide range of research fields in folklife, points of contact result, in both theory and method, with numerous related sciences. This is one of the reasons why folklife sees itself as an integrating field of study with an interdisciplinary bias. In order to understand man better as formed, acting and creating in a cultural perspective and as dependent on historical, economic, social, intellectual and socio-cultural processes, a wide range of methods is employed to analyse evidence of culture transmitted in material and traditional form.

This is achieved with modules dedicated to the following fields: European cultures and societies, working methods and empirical research in cultural sciences, identities and lifestyles, material culture and museology, culture in media and communications, and an introduction to European ethnology. Students furthermore acquire competences in the areas of scientific working and communication and in practice-oriented application of the knowledge they have gained during studies. They develop abilities, in both individual and group work, in cultural/analytical understanding, critical appraisal and solution-oriented treatment of cultural phenomena and socio-cultural problems present and past.

The Bachelor programme in European Ethnology/Folklife with its methodical, subject-specific and extra-disciplinary skills, is thus also a preparation for flexible response to tasks in various career fields (such as museums and media, culture management and tourism, at universities and other educational establishments, or self-employment).

Identities and lifestyles characterise partial cultures of modern as well as historical societies regarding their everyday life. Symbols, norms and strategies for action become important, since they influence group and gender identities or ascribe identities in a communicative regard. The preparation, analysis and interpretation of certain subject areas and material groups of everyday and popular culture based on, e.g. regionality, nationality, territoriality, gender, sex and minorities are an integral part of this course. - Preparation, analysis and interpretation of certain subject areas and material groups of everyday and popular culture based on, e.g. regionality, nationality, territoriality as well as gender, sex and minorities.
Intended learning outcomes
The students acquire knowledge of practical application in regard to personal managements and the organisations of groups. Furthermore, students will develop sensitivity and the ability to discuss stereotypes and prejudices as well as their creation and exploitation. The module aims to develop an application-oriented awareness of the problems in terms of group and gender identities as well as so-called subcultures. - Knowledge of practical application in regard to personal managements and the organisation of groups. - Development of sensitivity and the ability to discuss stereotypes and prejudices as well as their creation and exploitation. - Development of an application-oriented awareness of the problems in terms of group and gender identities and so-called subcultures.
