Module components 01-ST-GFDG1a-1 and 01-ST-GFDG2-1 acquaint students with essential methods in the discipline and discuss relevant issues relating to christology, the doctrine of God, theological anthropology, and the doctrine of the sacraments. Important aspects of the biblico-Christian concept of God, arguments for the existence of God, atheist criticism of religion, the diversity of religious beliefs and world views as a modern phenomenon, theology and the natural sciences, analytic philosophy of language and the possibility of God-talk, the documents Gaudium et Spes and Unsere Hoffnung . The Catholic theology of religions and Nostra Aetate , models of a theology of religion and the pluralistic hypothesis, the history and concepts of God of non-Christian world religions (Indian religions, Buddhism, Judaism).
Intended learning outcomes
At the end of the course, students will have become familiar with the methods typically used in the discipline. They will also be familiar with the biblical foundations for a systematic reflection upon the issues identified above as well as with the decisions of the tradition of the magisterium of the Church that are relevant to them. In addition, students will have developed the ability to determine the relevance of faith to contemporary issues and to theologially justify it. Students will have been introduced to the God-talk of fundamental theology and will have developed the ability to independently apply what they have learned to contemporary issues. They will have become familiar with the Catholic theology of religions and will be able to independently situate themselves within the current debate.

The relationship between Jesus Christ and the origins of the Church, New Testament concepts of the Church, different visions of the Church throughout history, the constitutions of the Vatican Councils. The major schisms in the history of Christianity. The history and goals of the modern ecumenical movement. Exercise to give students the opportunity to explore the topics covered in the lecture in more detail. The course thus gives an overview of the material to be covered. A particular focus is on the ecumenical movement.
Intended learning outcomes
At the end of the course, students will have become familiar with the origins of the Church and the contemporary debate in theological philosophy. They will thus be able to make a critical and informed contribution to the contemporary debate in the field of ecumenical ecclesiology. They will be familiar with the different concepts of the Church developed by Vatican I and Vatican II and will be able to critically evaluate the relevant magisterial texts. Students will be able to describe the position of the Catholic Church in the context of the division of Christianity into different denominations and to engage in discussions with representatives of other churches and ecclesial communities.

Investigating specific problems in ethics, this module explores the topics discussed in the lecture on the fundamental principles of theological fundamental ethics in more detail and gives students the opportunity to develop a more thorough understanding of different approaches to ethics. The module aims to equip students with a comprehensive theoretical background of topics for the religious education and ethics classroom. Topics to be discussed include: models for the constitution and justification of ethical norms; models in ethics, e. g.: deontological ethics, virtue ethics, discourse ethics; approaches to theological ethics.
Intended learning outcomes
At the end of the course, students will have developed a thorough understanding of key approaches to philosophical and theological ethics. They will have a sound background knowledge that will enable them to teach topics in religion and ethics that are required by the curriculum in an appropriate manner that is tailored to their pupils' needs.

An introduction to good academic practice and discussion of what the Church expects from religious education teachers. Introduction to, and training in, academic writing and research, including but not limited to guidance on how to conduct a literature search. Mentorat für künftige Religionslehrer/-innen of the Diocese of Würzburg: Exploration of magisterial texts that discuss the role of religious education teacher. Reflection upon what the Church expects from religious education teachers. Potential tensions between academic theology and the students' own faith. An opportunity for students to discover theological positions and develop theological and spiritual positions of their own. Reflection upon the students' career goals and their spiritual biographies.
Intended learning outcomes
At the end of the course, students will be familiar with, and able to use, scholarly methods and will know how to conduct a literature search. In addition, students will know what the Church expects from religious education teachers. They will have developed a basic ability to develop and articulate their own theological and spiritual positions.

Lecture to acquaint students with the development of church offices and structures in early Christianity and, in particular, with the diversity of offices in early Christianity, the development and establishment of the office of bishop, the supraregional organisation of church structures, the development of patriarchates and the historical development of the claim of supremacy of the Bishop of Rome.
Intended learning outcomes
At the end of the course, students will have become familiar with the development of church offices and structures in the historical context of early Christianity and will be able to communicate information on the topic to others in an appropriate manner. They will understand historicity as a characteristic of the constitution of the Church. Students will have developed an awareness of how the key decisions in this area that set the course for the early Church are conditioned by their historical contexts and will be able to distinguish between this and its claim to transtemporal validity.

ECTS	Method of grading	Only after succ. compl. of module(s)

Duration	Module level	Other prerequisites

Contents
Discussion of fundamental issues in the dialogue of religions in the context of key positions developed in the Second Vatican Council (freedom of conscience and of religion, the People of God) and its expressions of appreciation for non-Christian religions. Investigation of the interrelation between politics, religion, and faith and how they impact upon individuals and today's secular society as a whole. Dialogue is about listening to what others have to say.
Intended learning outcomes
We cannot explore issues relating to faith and the meaning of life if we cannot think for ourselves. Faith as a subjective form of knowledge helps students enhance their personal skills as well as their interpersonal skills for interacting with others/individuals practising other faiths or no faith. Developing the ability to see themselves from the point of view of others, students will enhance their capacity for self-criticism. Students will learn to distinguish between the linguistic sign and the signified object or concept.

Contents
There are numerous religions, and all of them have been criticised. We live in a world that is religiously plural. But how do the religions themselves deal with religious pluralism? The course discusses phenomena of religious uncertainty - atheism, fundamentalism, syncretism, and pluralism - that can transform any religion into an ideology. Any individual, no matter what his/her religion, may develop a dangerous understanding of faith as an ideology. In this context, we must, and will, also critically examine the traditional concept of Christian mission.
Intended learning outcomes
As we live together as a peaceful society, we are increasingly confronted with atheism, fundamentalism, syncretism, and pluralism. At the end of the course, students will have developed the ability to investigate, and reflect upon, patterns for the justification of ideologies.

Thesis

(10 ECTS credits)

Preparation of a written Hausarbeit (thesis) in accordance with the provisions of Section 29 LPO I (examination regulations for teaching-degree programmes) is a prerequisite for teaching degree students to be admitted to the Erste Staatsprüfung (First State Examination). In accordance with the provisions of Section 29 LPO I, students studying for a teaching degree Hauptschule may write this thesis in the subject Didaktik einer Fächergruppe der Hauptschule (Didactics of a Group of Subjects of Hauptschule), in the subject they selected as Unterrichtsfach (subject studied with a focus on the scientific discipline) or in the subject Erziehungswissenschaften (Educational Science). Pursuant to Section 29 Subsection 1 Sentence 2 LPO I, students may also choose to write an interdisciplinary thesis.
