Course of Studies - Contents and Objectives

During their Master's degree, the graduates deepened their educational knowledge and applied it to real world situations. Thanks to their studies, they are able not only to understand and interpret structural contexts and social dynamics but also to develop innovative solutions to them. The ability to link classical and contemporary theory and empirical educational research qualifies the graduates to work in an educational profession with a reflective/critical background and awareness. Through self-designed teaching projects, the graduates acquired theoretical and practical knowledge based on contemporary professional skills. They are capable of working independently and, based on systematic-scientific criteria, they can develop practical research projects using the latest methods, and then refer them back to the relevant theoretical concept/approach. The research methods include advanced techniques of quantitative and qualitative analysis as well as an elaborated research/study design. Practice-oriented fields of application were examined within an independent research. With an emphasis on education management, the graduates are prepared and qualified to work in a conceptional and operational section of education and business institutions e.g. teambuilding, employee development or organisational development.
