Course of Studies - Contents and Objectives

The course pursues the goal of laying in-depth foundations in the subject by scientific study of German language and literature. The studies in German cover these individual points:

- An overview of the history of German literature from the beginnings to the present in the context of the history of European literature, thought and culture
- Fundamentals of evaluation and mediation of literary texts on methodical principles
- Basic knowledge of current and historical theories of literature
- Basic knowledge in the fundamental disciplines rhetoric, poetics/aesthetics, narratology
- Awareness of the problems of a scientific fixing of terminology (epochs, genres, methodologies)
- Competence in reading and translating earlier forms of German
- Awareness of the problem of alterity in medieval literature
- Ability to reflect on literary texts in their artificiality and historical context
- Ability to delineate appropriately contextual relationships in both oral and written forms and - using relevant media - to present them suitably to a target group
- Fundamental knowledge of the systematic levels of the German language (phonetics/phonology, graphematics, morphology, syntax, semantics, pragmatics).
- An overview of the most important historical lines of development in the German language in both the German language (Old High German, Middle High German, Early Modern High German) and in relation to historical sectional views of tendencies in phonetics/phonology, graphematics, morphology, syntax, semantics and pragmatics.
- Developing an awareness of question complexes, investigational methods and theoretical approaches in linguistics
- Basic knowledge of the most important research paradigms in current German linguistics
- Ability to recognise, analyse and reflect on present-day use of language in its various manifestations in the media with the help of a pool of linguistic methods
- Ability to recognise historical texts, to place them chronologically, geographically and socially and to reflect appropriately on their source situation with the help of the available methods of historical linguistics
- Basic knowledge of concepts and methods in presenting German language and literature (didactics)

One of the following sub-modules has to be chosen. The sub-module argumentation and verbalisation concerns the practice of writing: How do I mount an argument? How far does a smart wording distinguish from an awkward one? When does a sentence is not only correct, but also nice and smart? What do you need to know if the intelligibility of a text should be ensured? How does a text receives argumentative density and rhetorical subtlety? The writing will exemplarily be practised on subjects that are relevant to the discipline, for example: How a recension about a subject book is written, how is the discussion of an evening of theatre or a literary novelty is written?; The sub-module recension comprises the practise of the text genre of recension by well-chosen literary texts (generally from authors of today) or by readings (depending on offers). The basis module information literacy, which focuses on information literacy in an academic context, is aimed at students of the humanities. This includes research strategies and tools, dealing with electronic information tools of the library, specific sources of information in the humanities: bibliographies, databases, catalogues, magazines, reference work, internet research and search engines, overview of information tools and literature administration, which students will use during their studies.
Intended learning outcomes
Concerning the sub-module argumentation and formulation: Students have the ability to formulate and argue as well as the ability to structure texts; Additionally, they will acquire stylistic, argumentative and structural basic principles of important text and linguistic levels. Concerning the sub-module recension: Students have worked on generic insights into modern literature and have learned how to deal with the text type "recension". Concerning the sub-module information competence to the humanities: Students know which information will be needed for certain purposes. They have the ability to find and evaluate information that are important to their discipline and, additionally, find relevant information in various sources. At the same time, they are particularly familiar with the different qualities of specific information sources (databases) with a limited access and generally accessible information (internet). Moreover, students are able to review, administrate and process the researched information for their individual needs with the help of literature administration programmes and e-learning applications. This module is designed to teach students how to find and deal with the necessary information and literature research for the thesis.

One of the following sub-modules must be chosen. The sub-module EDP-Philology gives an overview of the discipline of digital humanities, the imparting of fundamental methods of digital humanities - abstraction, formalisation - and their use in the data modelling. Additionally, the module gives an overview of principles of the text encoding and relevant encoding systems (e.g. TEI) and design of digital editions, corpora and information systems as well as an overview of typical application methods of digital humanities in the humanities. The sub-module media gives an overview of the mediality of language and literature in a synchronic and diachronic view, particularly of the competition of different media (orality/textuality), the media change (e.g. handwriting/printing) and the consequences of mediality on the methods of literary production and reception.
Concerning the sub-module EDP philology: Students are able to use chosen methods of digital humanities in the humanities. Concerning the sub-module media: Students know how to deal with different media. They are able to describe and explain the media change and to analyse media appropriately.

The seminar provides students with fundamental and advanced knowledge in particular sub-areas of linguistics. This theoretical knowledge will be applied to analysis and description of specific linguistic expressions in order to practise and consolidate the acquired knowledge.
Intended learning outcomes
Students possess the ability to analyse more complex linguistic units on the basis of the acquired knowledge and are familiar with respective specialised literature of the corresponding subarea.

Within the lecture, this module aims to provide an overview of the German syntax with focus on the valency grammatical sentence analysis, e.g. determining clauses by the use of grammatical samples, determining valency depending and non-depending clauses, syntactical function and semantics of relative clauses, formal description of the structure of complex sentences. During this module, which is a part of the seminar, students will practise the analytical and description methods, covered during the lecture, by authentic sentences. This module will start with the analysis of simple sentences, then goes over to levels of clauses and will continue with the analysis of difficult sentences up to sub-levels. The tutorial, which is a part of the module, provides further practise and students will be confident with the covered description and analytical methods.
Intended learning outcomes
Students possess solid knowledge of the sub-area syntax with focus on valency grammar, they are able to identify and determine syntactic structures and are acquainted with the description and analysis of linguistic units up to the sentence level assuredly.

Within the lecture, this module aims to provide an overview and first introduction to the important parts of German linguistics. At the same time, the seminar that is a part of the module, provides students with analytical and description methods up to the word level, for example morphological segmentation and classification of individual word forms into basic morphemes, morphology and inflectional morphemes, morphological and semantic analysis of word formation structures, phonetic and phonological transcription in International Phonetic Alphabet (IPA)-phonetics, graphical realisation of phonemes and associated with orthography principles. The associated tutorial helps to practise further and to become more confident with the analytical and description methods, acquired in the seminar.
Intended learning outcomes
Students possess an overview of the discipline German linguistics and its individual subdisciplines. They are able to describe and analyse linguistic units up to the word level assuredly. Thanks to the module, students are familiar with the basic analytical and description techniques of linguistics, which will be extended and consolidated in the following modules.
