Students complete a second subject-related university or non-university work placement up to approximately eight weeks (about 300 hours) full-time with an employer.
Intended learning outcomes
On the basis of the experience gained during the first work placement, students have learnt to inform themselves more specifically about occupational fields and their requirements and to apply for a work placement more successfully. They have explored a further occupational field relevant to historians and have applied not only the knowledge and skills acquired during their studies, but also the experience gained during their first work placement. They have critically reflected and described their experiences and have made a more in-depth assessment of their professional interests and aptitude.
