for the Subject
Catholic Theology
with the degree "Magister Theologiae"
(300 ECTS credits)

Examination regulations version: 2009
Responsible: Faculty of Catholic Theology

Course of Studies - Contents and Objectives

The qualification Magister or Magistra Theologiae is a canonical degree as defined in the Apostolic Constitution “Sapientia Christiana” of April 29, 1976, in connection with “Accommodation decree I” of January 1, 1983, introduction, par. 2.

Graduates qualify for the tasks

- of a Roman Catholic priest both as a diocesan priest and as a priest in a religious order,
- of professional employments in the Church, e.g. as a pastoral assistant or as a teacher of religious education, and in various spheres of ecclesiastic activity, as religious instruction in youth or adult education and catechetics, Church administration or government,
- in theological research and the teaching of theology at University level.

The programme concerned is a full course of theological studies [“Theologisches Vollstudium”] characterized as a “One-subject-, five-years-, 300 ECTS-points-course” in accordance with “Basic points for the structure of degree courses involving Catholic or Protestant theology/religion [Eckpunkte für die Studienstruktur in Studiengängen mit Katholischer oder Evangelischer Theologie/Religion]” as determined by the Conference of Secretaries of Education to the German States in 2007-12-13 [Beschluss der Kultusministerkonferenz vom 13.12.2007]. This programme comprises two successive segments.

First segment, semesters 1 through 6. In this first part of their studies, students will have acquired a basic knowledge of biblical, historical, systematic and practical theology, as well as philosophy. They will also have gained the methodical tools for a independent and critical approach to their academic work.

Second segment, semesters 7 through 10. Graduates will have consolidated this knowledge of the entire area of theology and philosophy, specializing in parts of it. They will have gained the skills prerequisite for their professional work on an academic basis as well as the expertise and competence required for independent theological research.

Both segments of the programme will have been accompanied by internships and further specific training to prepare graduates for the practical challenges of their profession.

Contents
Discussion of, and reflection upon, the theological self-understanding of the Church from the point of view of systematic theology based on New Testament ecclesiologies and their metaphors of the Church as the Body of Christ, the People of God, or the House of God. A particular focus will be on the ecclesiology of the Second Vatican Council. Discussion of the historical development of ecclesiology and the constitutional law of the Latin Church to give students a clear picture of the Church.
Intended learning outcomes
At the end of the course, students will have become familiar with different models of ecclesiology. They will be able to critically reflect upon different ecclesial realities and take their own well-founded position on them. Students will have developed a critical awareness of the fact that our understanding of the Church is shaped not only by our theoretical knowledge, but also by our actions.

The richness of Christian spirituality and piety. Discussion of the different forms they have taken throughout history and ways to analyse them in the context of today's society. Insights into theories on the activities of the Church as well as into the different types of Christian community and communication of Christian faith (sacraments, the teaching office and the basic functions of the Church, learning processes in religious education).
At the end of the course, students will have gained an insight into the richness of Christian piety and the diverse ways in which Christians live and lived their faith. They will know how they originated and will have become aware of the fact that they arose from prevailing circumstances. Students will have developed an awareness of the fact that the Church today is operating in a society that is characterised by diversity and will have become familiar with relevant norms. In addition, students will have developed the ability to make use of the tensions between norms and situations to spark their own theological and practical creativity.

Looking at different approaches to teaching religious education, the section on religious education discusses key problems in the subject in a multicultural and multireligious context. The section on pastoral theology reflects upon the process of an individual's becoming a Christian and the way it impacts upon his/her biography; a particular focus is on the influence of the milieu in which an individual lives. The section on social ethics discusses human behaviour and the dimensions of socio-ethical education. The individual module components all share the theme of exploring aspects relating to the process of becoming and being a Christian.
At the end of the course, students will have learned to think of being a Christian as a multidimensional process. They will have gained deeper insights into the religious development of individuals and will be able to interrelate it with the contemporary cultural and social environment. They will have become familiar with approaches to supporting the processes individuals are undergoing in their religious development, processes that expose individuals to the richness of Christian tradition, warrant freedom and individuality, and view the social context as a welcome challenge.

Looking at the tradition of the magisterium of the Church as well as topical issues, the lecture on the doctrine of the sacraments equips students with a grounding in theoretical perspectives on communication. It discusses the administration of the sacraments in general, and baptism, confirmation, and eucharist in particular, from the points of view of anthropology, christology, and ecclesiology. The lecture on eschatology explains Christian hope in the face of death from the points of view of general and individual eschatology and discusses it based on biblical and magisterial sources. The lecture on missiology discusses our understanding of missionary activity today as well as topical issues in the dialogue of religions.
At the end of the course, students will have become familiar with the understanding of sacraments as communicative acts and will have developed an awareness of the changes that our understanding of the concept of the sacrament has undergone in the tradition of the magisterium of the Church and the history of theology. They will be able to formulate a theology of baptism, confirmation, and eucharist that is appropriate in contemporary times. In addition, students will have become familiar with key concepts and problems in eschatology, including but not limited to the kingdom of God and contemporary concepts of resurrection. They will have developed the ability to explain Christian hope in the face of death from the points of view of general and individual eschatology. The section on religious education provides an introduction to the epistemological foundations of, and essential methods in, the subject. It introduces students to research practice in religious education as an empirically-oriented discipline. The course may use examples from research projects to illustrate the matter discussed. The section on pastoral theology focuses on the investigation of the Christian community. It aims to extend and consolidate what students have learned earlier about building up congregations. The module component focusing on homiletics discusses the communicative aspect of preaching in theory and practice.
Intended learning outcomes
At the end of the course, students will have developed an understanding of research and research methods in religious education. They will be able to design their own defined research projects, applying the concepts and methods they have learned. Students will have gained deeper insights into the distinguishing characteristics of the Christian community. They will have developed the ability to analyse and build up congregations as well as to understand them in their context. In addition, students will have developed an awareness of the communicative aspect of preaching and will have gained proficiency in preaching.

Contents
Detailed discussion of selected topics in canon law (e. g. matrimonial law of the Church, the sanctifying function of the Church) and liturgy (e. g. sacramentals, the liturgical year, the Liturgy of the Hours).
Intended learning outcomes
At the end of the course, students will have become familiar with the regulations that govern the basic functions of the Church. They will have developed the ability to reflect upon, and find appropriate solutions to, current problems in areas such as pastoral care based on what they have learned. They will have gained a comprehensive overview of liturgy in the Catholic Church in an ecumenical and cultural context and will be able to reflect upon liturgical celebration from the points of view of anthropology and theology.

What sets the Catholic theology programme offered by the University of Würzburg apart from programmes offered by other institutions is that it offers deeper insights into regional and eastern church history and also covers topics in ecumenical theology and missiology. This module includes courses in the areas of eastern church history, ecumenical theology, Franconian church history, and missiology that students are required to take in the focus area (cf. Section 5 Subsection 8 Sentence 3 academic and examination regulations) if they have not taken and successfully completed one course in eastern church history with two weekly contact hours, one course in Franconian church history with one weekly contact hour as well as one course in missiology with one weekly contact hour in the focus area. The topics covered in the courses vary from semester to semester. See the course catalogue for the current semester for more information.
At the end of the module, students will have explored additional topics in theology that are not covered in Catholic theology programmes offered by other institutions: Having gained deeper insights into regional church history, students will be able to interrelate regional with eastern church history as well as to look at key issues, including but not limited to issues in missiology, and their impact - past and present - through a comparative lens.

This module is part of a series of modules that runs over eight semesters and aims to equip students with the comprehensive knowledge and skills in psychology that are useful in the pastoral care for individuals and groups as well as dealing with institutional structures and organisations (cf. Rahmenordnung für die Priesterbildung, the German charter for priestly formation, 2003 (69,71, and 72)). Students who do not wish to take the entire series of modules can take this module as a mandatory elective. The modules 01-M23b1 through 01-M23b-4 that are available in winter semesters discuss selected topics in personality, communications, and social psychology, the psychology of groups as well as developmental and clinical psychology. They equip students with knowledge and skills that will enable them to understand internal and external influences on human behaviour, in particular when faced with conflicts or problems, and to develop appropriate responses in the different fields of pastoral activity (worship, evangelism, service, and community). The block-taught modules 01-M23b-5 or -6 that are available in summer semesters give students the opportunity to enhance their personal, team working, and leadership skills.
At the end of the course, students will have developed psychological skills that are useful in pastoral care. In addition, they will be able to critically reflect upon their own folk psychology and will understand themselves and others better.

This module is offered in cooperation with Bischöfliches Priesterseminar Würzburg, the seminary of the Diocese of Würzburg. The University of Würzburg provides guidance and support to students who are subject to the regulations for priestly formation of the seminary. It helps them prepare for their mandatory placements, provides competent support during those placements, and gives them the opportunity to reflect upon the placements in wrap-up discussion sessions. Placements will have a duration of four to six weeks, and students will be expected to write a report on each placement. Those reports will serve as the basis for the wrap-up discussions. The aim of the module is to provide students with first-hand insights into different fields of pastoral activity and give them the opportunity to engage in theory-based critical reflection on the experiences they have made.
To pass this module, students will be expected to be able to draw upon the knowledge they have gained throughout the programme, identify the challenges and opportunities presented by particular situations, propose appropriate measures, put them into practice (under expert guidance) as well as to justify and reflect upon the associated processes.

This module is offered in cooperation with Zentrum für Pastoralassistenten/-innen, the Würzburg centre for theology students and future lay pastors, and gives students who are subject to the training regulations of the centre the opportunity to gain insights into the work of the lay pastor. It helps students prepare for their mandatory placements, provides competent support during those placements, and gives them the opportunity to reflect upon the placements in wrap-up discussion sessions. Placements will have a duration of three to six weeks, and students will be expected to write a report on each placement. Those reports will serve as the basis for the wrap-up discussions. The aim of the module is to provide students with first-hand insights into different fields activity of lay pastors and give them the opportunity to engage in theory-based critical reflection on the experiences they have made.
To pass this module, students will be expected to be able to draw upon the knowledge they have gained throughout the programme and engage in critical reflection on their experiences based on the pastoral/practical, interpersonal, spiritual, and institutional skills lay pastors need to possess.

Theological anthropology and the doctrine of creation. Old and New Testament foundations and their development in theological tradition. The Schöpfungstheologie (Theology of Creation) lecture is dogmatically oriented and discusses the concept of the world as the creation of God in the context of topical interdisciplinary problems and trinitarian theories; in addition, it provides a systematic analysis of the related Christian understanding of the human person. The systematic opinions and definitions of Christian tradition are discussed in the context of modern natural and human sciences and the implications for our need to take responsibility for human life considered.
At the end of the course, students will have developed the ability to distinguish between different biblical views of creation and the human person and to situate them within a context. They will have become familiar with the key structural elements of the Christian understanding of the world and the human person. Students will be able to reflect upon issues in philosophy and the natural sciences in contemporary interdisciplinary debate in the context of the trinitarian doctrine of creation. In addition, students will be familiar with how we as Christians have to take responsibility for human life in the face of the challenges posed by medicine and biotechnology.

This module discusses the biblical as well as the systematic doctrine of God. It uses the Old Testament to illustrate Israel's way towards monotheism. Gospels, epistles, and the Book of Acts are sources for New Testament God-talk. The systematic doctrine of God develops the treatise of Trinity on the basis of scripture, tradition, and magisterium and highlights its relevance to our current understanding of the world and the challenges that face us today.
At the end of the course, students will be able to trace Israel's way towards monotheism. They will have gained an insight into the richness of New Testament God-talk found in the historical Jesus and the writings of early Christian communities. Students will have become familiar with the sources of the systematic doctrine of God. They will be able to evaluate the concept of trinity in the light of our current understanding of the world, the concepts of God in other religions, and the challenges that face us today.

Discussion of biblical foundations with special attention to Old Testament Messianic texts as well as New Testament texts about the life and works of Jesus of Nazareth. Investigation of problems in early church relating to the faith in Jesus Christ as the Saviour and the Lord, including but not limited to questions about the oneness and the plurality of God and the relationship between God and humankind in Jesus Christ; discussion of the historical development of the debate during the first five centuries AD. Discussion of christology as a reflection on the centre and source of Christian faith in today's religiously plural world; an introduction to the historical Jesus and the Christ of faith.
At the end of the course, students will have become familiar with the Messianic texts as well as New Testament texts about the life and works of Jesus Christ. They will have become familiar with the christology and models of biblical texts and the early Church as well as with the historical development of the debate during the first five centuries AD. Students will have become familiar with systematic issues relating to the Bible and the first four ecumenical councils as well as with the christology of the Middle Ages and the modern age. They will have gained deeper insights into, and a fuller understanding of, a contemporary christology and the tensions between christology and soteriology. They will have developed an appreciation of christology as a reflection on the centre and source of Christian faith and will be able to explain the dogma of Christ in interreligious dialogue. Students will be able to critically reflect upon topical issues and take their own well-founded position on them.

1 semester	undergraduate	By way of exception, additional prerequisites are listed in the section on assessments.
Contents
Discussing examples from the sacramental (baptism, penance, eucharist) and personal (sexuality) lives of individuals, this module investigates, and reflects upon, different ways of Christian thought and ethics. In this context, it also explores some of the main controversies in theology.
Intended learning outcomes
At the end of the course, students will have gained an insight into the development of ecclesial theology and practice. They will be able to look at life and its relationship to the sacraments of baptism, penance, and eucharist from new perspectives.
