Students are introduced to selected topics in biblical theology. They develop specialised and methodical skills.
Intended learning outcomes
At the end of the course, students will have developed a knowledge of selected topics in biblical exegesis as well as subject-specific transferable skills. Students will be able to group the books of the Bible by themes and to interpret them on the basis of specific criteria. Having engaged in a thorough review of the texts, students will be able to work with the Bible in an appropriate manner - in the classroom, the parish, and the public discourse.

Investigating specific problems in ethics, this module explores the topics discussed in the lecture on the fundamental principles of theological fundamental ethics in more detail and gives students the opportunity to develop a more thorough understanding of different approaches to ethics. The module aims to equip students with a comprehensive theoretical background of topics for the religious education and ethics classroom. Topics to be discussed include: models for the constitution and justification of ethical norms; models in ethics, e. g.: deontological ethics, virtue ethics, discourse ethics; approaches to theological ethics.
Intended learning outcomes
At the end of the course, students will have developed a thorough understanding of key approaches to philosophical and theological ethics. They will have a sound background knowledge that will enable them to teach topics in religion and ethics that are required by the curriculum in an appropriate manner that is tailored to their pupils' needs.

Contents
Lecture to acquaint students with the development of church offices and structures in early Christianity and, in particular, with the diversity of offices in early Christianity, the development and establishment of the office of bishop, the supraregional organisation of church structures, the development of patriarchates and the historical development of the claim of supremacy of the Bishop of Rome.
Intended learning outcomes
At the end of the course, students will have become familiar with the development of church offices and structures in the historical context of early Christianity and will be able to communicate information on the topic to others in an appropriate manner. They will understand historicity as a characteristic of the constitution of the Church. Students will have developed an awareness of how the key decisions in this area that set the course for the early Church are conditioned by their historical contexts and will be able to distinguish between this and its claim to transtemporal validity.

Students are introduced to selected topics in church history and historical theology. They develop specialised and methodical skills.
Intended learning outcomes
At the end of the course, students will have developed a knowledge of selected topics in historical theology as well as subject-specific transferable skills. They will be able to situate events, developments, and major figures in church history within their historical context and will have developed an awareness of the impact they had. Students will have developed hermeneutical skills that will enable them to critically evaluate historical sources. They will be able to use research methods in historical theology and to make their findings (somewhat) relevant to contemporary issues.

ECTS	Method of grading	Only after succ. compl. of module(s)

Contents
Discussion of fundamental issues in the dialogue of religions in the context of key positions developed in the Second Vatican Council (freedom of conscience and of religion, the People of God) and its expressions of appreciation for non-Christian religions. Investigation of the interrelation between politics, religion, and faith and how they impact upon individuals and today's secular society as a whole. Dialogue is about listening to what others have to say.
Intended learning outcomes
We cannot explore issues relating to faith and the meaning of life if we cannot think for ourselves. Faith as a subjective form of knowledge helps students enhance their personal skills as well as their interpersonal skills for interacting with others/individuals practising other faiths or no faith. Developing the ability to see themselves from the point of view of others, students will enhance their capacity for self-criticism. Students will learn to distinguish between the linguistic sign and the signified object or concept.

There are numerous religions, and all of them have been criticised. We live in a world that is religiously plural. But how do the religions themselves deal with religious pluralism? The course discusses phenomena of religious uncertainty - atheism, fundamentalism, syncretism, and pluralism - that can transform any religion into an ideology. Any individual, no matter what his/her religion, may develop a dangerous understanding of faith as an ideology. In this context, we must, and will, also critically examine the traditional concept of Christian mission.
Intended learning outcomes
As we live together as a peaceful society, we are increasingly confronted with atheism, fundamentalism, syncretism, and pluralism. At the end of the course, students will have developed the ability to investigate, and reflect upon, patterns for the justification of ideologies.
