Critical investigation of a topical issue in religious education and reflection of the debate on, and potential solutions to, that issue. Evaluation of the relevance the issue investigated has to teaching in the religious education classroom. The following issues may be investigated: social developments in the area of religion, new approaches to teaching in the religious education classroom, current cultural and religious phenomena, methods and media in the religious education classroom.
Intended learning outcomes
At the end of the course, students will have developed the ability to outline a topical issue in religious education from multiple points of view and to take their own well-founded position on that issue. They will be able to recognise the relevance the issue has to teaching in the religious education classroom and to identify implications for classroom practice. Students will be able to independently identify new trends in religious education teaching and to evaluate their relevance. In addition, they will be able to reflect upon the connections between social developments and issues in religious education.

Discussing primary sources and research literature, this course will convey essentials, methods, and ways of thinking in systematic theology. It will also provide an introduction to theological discussions of, with, and for pupils.
Intended learning outcomes
At the end of the course, students will be familiar with essential concepts and will have developed subject-specific thinking in the area of dogmatics. They will not only be able to comprehend and reproduce theological texts but also to situate them within a context and render them adequately. Students will be able to describe issues in theology for, and together with, pupils as well as to apply their knowledge of systematic theology when they discuss those issues with their pupils.

Familiarity with methods and/or media in the religious education classroom. Reflection of the relevance these have to religious education and critical evaluation of their advantages and limitations. Practical techniques to develop proficiency in the use of the methods/media selected as well as planning, implementing, and evaluating them, taking aspects of religious education didactics into account (where applicable).
Intended learning outcomes
At the end of the course, students will have developed the ability to evaluate the relevance the methods/media discussed have to religious education. They will be able to design pupil-oriented learning scenarios, incorporating these methods/media, that are suitable for the topic to be taught and will help their pupils reach the learning outcomes intended for the lesson.

An introduction to classroom practice. Training in specific methods for use in the Protestant religious education classroom on the basis of selected instructional models and classroom projects as well as examples from the classroom. This module prepares students for their transition into professional practice. It gives them an opportunity to gain insights into day-to-day school life and equips them with experience the courses in phase two of their training will draw upon. The module also enhances the didactic and methodological skills of students.
Intended learning outcomes
At the end of the course, students will have found out how they feel in the role of teachers and will have developed the ability to select teaching methods and approaches as well as to assess whether these were appropriate.

Focusing on learning by teaching, this module provides students with an opportunity to develop key transferable skills such as organisational and leadership skills, effective communication, information literacy, and the ability to communicate subject matter to others.
Intended learning outcomes
At the end of the course, students will have developed written and oral communication skills. They will be able to communicate effectively and resolve conflicts. In addition, students will have learned how to search for information efficiently, verify the information they have found, and evaluate how relevant it is. They will have developed the ability to communicate subject matter to others in a clear and efficient manner that is tailored to the needs of their audience.
